Oral arguments on December 11 at 2:00 pm
in Court Room 1017, 3 Pemberton Square, Boston.
Court will hear argument on the issue of the Supplementary Final Environmental Impact Report's compliance with MEPA. *December 11, 2013

There was a major victory in the state court in 2013

- The judge in the state court ruled that the certification of the Environmental Impact Report (EIR) was "arbitrary and capricious."
- The judge wrote "the Biolab, with its BSL4 laboratory is no ordinary project, the potential risks it poses to the environment and public health are extraordinary and, potentially catastrophic".

"In addition to vacating the certification of the Biolab project, he also ordered Boston University to resubmit its EIR with answers to two main questions:

1. "What is the worst that can happen if a laboratory worker were infected with a contagious pathogen he was studying?"
2. Would the impact be significantly less if the Biolab were located outside of a city?"
